BIODATA:

Jean Noury Saad holds a Ph.D. in Mining, Oil and Gas from the University of Oil and Gas (Ploiesti) in Romania, specialization" Oil and Gas Transmission and Storage "2002". Assistant professor in Petroleum Engineering Department, Faculty of Chemical and Petroleum Engineering, Al-Baath University. Vice Dean of Scientific Affairs at the Faculty of Chemical and Petroleum Engineering at Al-Baath University from 2016 till now. His scientific interests include natural gas processing (Sweetening and dehydration of natural gas, recovery of heavy hydrocarbons and recovery of sulfur), design and construction of oil and natural gas pipelines and distribution networks, study of fluids flow in pipelines and operational simulation using the HYSYS program. He published several researches and articles, the most important of which are: "The Effect of Thermodynamic Properties of Natural Gas on Determining the Operational Conditions of Transmission Pipelines", "Evaluation of Natural Gas Dehydration Process Using Different Types of Glycol", "Natural Gas Transmission Lines" and "LNG Tankers". He supervises on students interested in the natural gas processing industry, design and construction of oil and natural gas pipelines and distribution networks.

EDUCATION:

2002 PhD in Mines, Oil and Gas. "Oil and Gas Transmission and Storage", University of Oil and Gas, Ploiesti, Romania
1995 Bachelor Degree in Petroleum Engineering, Al-Baath University.

HONORS AND AWARDS:

None.
